One of my greatest honors this year has been helping constituents with various needs with the federal...

Dear Congressman Dave Taylor,

As a Polish poet in political exile in Germany since the martial law era of 1981, forcibly sent by the communist PRL authorities on December 15, 1992, I extend my heartfelt New Year's wishes to you and your family. May 2026 strengthen your collaboration with President Donald Trump in the global Paradigm Shift – restoring greatness to America, Europe, and the world through traditional values and demographic renewal.

In response to your question: "What should be Congress's top priority in 2026?", I suggest promoting traditional family and procreation to counter demographic decline. This echoes the need to address how unchecked immigration feeds into a market of deviations, including homosexual trends that undermine natural population growth, from Ohio to Poland.

I've dedicated my Sonnet XVIII to you, fusing Shakespearean tradition with AI insights, as a poetic contribution to this vital dialogue. Thank you for inviting such voices.With respect and solidarity,

Stefan Kosiewski

INFORMATIONAL BRIEF[2]
Stefan Kosiewski and Sonnet XVIII ("New Shakespeare Sonnets" Cycle)
Prepared for:
Office of Congressman Dave Taylor (U.S. House of Representatives)

Purpose of the Brief
To provide concise background on the author Stefan Kosiewski, the literary project known as "New Shakespeare Sonnets", and the intent and context of Sonnet XVIII, dedicated to Congressman Taylor in response to the question:
"What should be Congress's top priority in 2026?"

1. Executive Summary

- Stefan Kosiewski is a Polish poet, essayist, and public intellectual living in Germany since the early 1990s as a result of political emigration from communist-era Poland.
- Sonnet XVIII is part of a larger experimental literary cycle combining classical poetic form with contemporary political reflection, co-authored with artificial intelligence tools as a commentary on culture in the digital age.
- The sonnet is not a legislative proposal, but a poetic response addressing themes of cultural continuity, demographic decline, media credibility, and civilizational responsibility.
- The dedication to Congressman Taylor reflects an invitation to cross-cultural dialogue, rather than partisan advocacy.

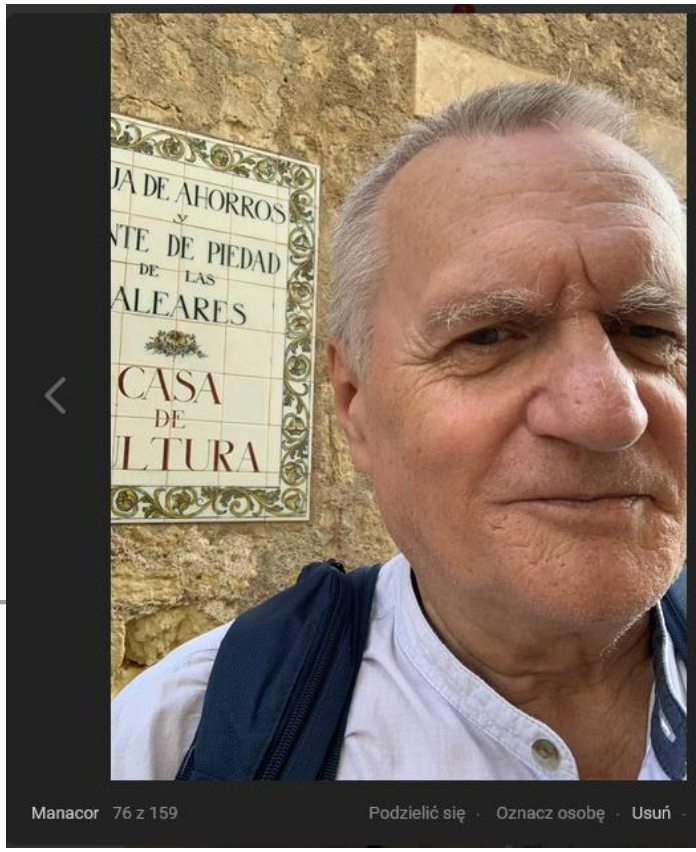
2. Author Background (Condensed)
Name: Stefan Kosiewski
Nationality: Polish
Residence: Federal Republic of Germany (since early 1990s)
Professional Profile:

- Poet and essayist

2 chatgpt.com/s/t_695505563800819191 2ad9a5ed98d4d8

- Former émigré publicist connected with Central and Eastern European dissident milieus
- Longstanding engagement with issues of political exile, cultural identity, and religion in public life



Historical Context:

- Left Poland following the repression associated with martial law and the post–Cold War transition period
- Active in émigré cultural and intellectual initiatives, particularly within the Polish and Central European diaspora

---

3. Literary Project: "New Shakespeare Sonnets"

- A contemporary poetic cycle written in strict classical sonnet form
- Modeled on Shakespearean and Romantic-era Polish metrics, rather than modern free verse
- Co-authored with AI systems (ChatGPT, Grok) as a deliberate experiment addressing:
  - authorship in the age of artificial intelligence,
  - continuity of classical culture under technological pressure,
  - preservation of structured moral discourse in public debate.

The AI collaboration is intended as meta-commentary, not automation of ideology.

4. Sonnet XVIII: Context and Intent

Occasion:

Response to Congressman Taylor's open inquiry inviting constituents and readers to share views on Congressional priorities for 2026.

Form:

- 14-line sonnet, classical structure
- Elevated, rhetorical language mixed with satirical elements

Core Themes (Non-Exhaustive):

- Long-term societal sustainability
- Demographic trends and cultural continuity
- The role of tradition, religion, and ethical reference points in policymaking
- Media accuracy and public trust
- The responsibility of political leadership toward future generations

Important Clarification:

The sonnet employs satire, exaggeration, and polemical imagery, consistent with European political poetry traditions. It should be read as symbolic critique, not literal policy prescription.

5. Relevance to Congressional Discourse

From a U.S. Congressional perspective, the value of the text lies in:

- Illustrating how international voices interpret American political leadership
- Demonstrating how cultural actors frame questions of governance outside formal policy language
- Offering insight into European intellectual responses to themes such as:
    - demographic change,
    - institutional legitimacy,
    - and civilizational continuity.

The work aligns with free expression and open dialogue, not with lobbying or legislative advocacy.

6. Positioning and Use

This brief may be used by Congressional staff:

- as background context for correspondence,
- as cultural reference material,
- or as an example of transatlantic intellectual engagement.

No endorsement of content, tone, or conclusions is implied or requested.

7. Key Takeaway
Sonnet XVIII represents a literary intervention, not a political demand.
Its primary function is to reframe a policy question as a civilizational one, using classical poetic language to provoke reflection on long-term priorities beyond electoral cycles.

I. Literary Critical Analysis[3] New Szek-spira Sonnet XVIII

(von Stefan Kosiewski & ChatGPT & Grok)

1. Genre and Metric

Sonnet XVIII was constructed strictly according to the canon of the classical Polish Romantic sonnet (Mickiewicz-Norwid line):

14 lines

thirteen-syllable with a semicolon after the 7th syllable

4 + 4 + 4 + 2 stanza layout

functional, logical progression of thought (thesis → antithesis → exemplum → point)

This distinguishes it fundamentally:

from the Petrarchist sonnet (8 + 6, strong love lyrics), from the Elizabethan sonnet (3 × quatrain + couplet, argumentative, rhetorical), and from early Romanesque forms (Provençal, Catalan).

Kosiewski consciously chooses the "high" form in order to introduce material from a low journalistic register – the classic strategy of moral satire from Juvenalis to Swift.

2. Intertextuality: Shakespeare – Goethe – Romanticism

Three main intertextual axes:
Shakespeare (Sonnets 1–17, "Fair Youth")

the motive of the call to procreation is rewritten from the private-court context to the political-civilizational context;

"Fair Youth" is not a person, but a figure of the addressee of power, who is responsible for the continuity of order.

Goethe ("Gretchenfrage")

a question about religion as an axiological test,

In the sonnet, it functions as a borderline question: about the foundations of political decisions.

Polish Romanticism

the rhythm and syntax evoke the tone of accusatory and prophetic speech, the lyrical subject assumes the position of an emigrant-witness, known from the tradition of the Great Emigration.

3. Satirical strategy

The sonnet uses conscious hyperbole and brutalization of language, which should be understood as:

rhetorical device, not a documentary description, continuation of the tradition of political satire (from Skarga to Gombrowicz), an attempt to "unseal" the media discourse through the contrast of form and content.

In the third quartet, the key motif of the "media error" (symbolic, not necessarily factual) appears:
It is an allegory of disinformation and mental shortcuts, not just a polemic with one newspaper article.

4. The ideological sense of the sonnet

In the ideological layer, Sonnet XVIII poses one fundamental question, answering the congressman's correspondence:

What is the foundation of responsible politics in the era of demographic, informational and axiological crisis?

The poet's answer is not a legislative program, but a poetic memorandum:

politics without cultural roots loses continuity, public language without semantic responsibility loses credibility,

A civilization that does not think in terms of the succession of generations loses its horizon.

5. The role of AI in the "New Shake-Spira" series

Co-authorship with AI (ChatGPT, Grok) is not a technical curiosity, but:

an element of meta-commentary on the posthuman era,

Below is a translation of Sonnet XVIII into Anglo-American (English, U.S.), made anew by ChatGPT, while maintaining the classic structure of the sonnet (14 lines, 4 + 4 + 4 + 2) and the rhetorical-satirical register of the original. In places where the Polish text uses brutalisms, I have used a semantic equivalent (sometimes slightly smoothed) to maintain readability in the American context, without changing the meaning or satirical function.

Sonnet XVIII

(American English translation by ChatGPT)[6]

"What should be Congress's top priority in 2026?"

Make Europe Great Again — the Gretchen question posed:
"And now tell me plainly what you think of faith."
My fair young prince, at that decisive node, yields to the Devil on the axis of truth.

In the European Union children are born — by gays, they say: mask-era ghosts, Spahn of the CDU, and Jarosław, Catholic chairman; they neither sow nor plow, yet still they multiply — absurd!

Poland and the world. "Original report": trash.
"The Luftwaffe buys Israeli drones — to guard
the Baltic Sea!" Dziennik Zachodni: smear,
"Defense Zone" — a Jew with lice, fed to the crowd.

The Fair Youth urged: beget a future line,
so that these sonnets may endure in time.

Explanatory note (to be concluded)
The above sonnet should be read not as a political declaration, but as a European satire of a high register, operating with conscious hyperbole, provocation and contrast of form with content. The author uses the classic sonnet model (Shakespeare – Goethe – Polish Romanticism) to transfer the question of the Congress's priorities from the level of current politics to the civilizational and cultural level: the continuity of generations, the credibility of public language and the responsibility of the elites towards the future.
The co-authorship with AI tools (ChatGPT, Grok) is metapoetic in nature: it raises the question of whether traditional forms of thinking and moral discourse can survive in the age of algorithms, automation, and media thought shortcuts. The translation preserves this idea, not affirming worldview theses, but reflecting the structure of the poetic argument.
